SUBJECT: Back to school? Already?

When I was a kid, summer seemed like the longest period of time imaginable… and we never went back to school ‘til after Labor Day.

Fast forward to 2014: we’re still in the month of August, and I feel like every kid in the country is already back in the classroom.

Now that the kiddies have their noses in their books again, our thoughts can turn to football, cooler weather and hearing the rumble of school buses rolling down our streets early each morning.

If you’ve got kids headed back (or who’ve already gone back), the best of luck to them!

May their grades be As and their homework loads be light (and may YOU survive, sanity intact, from Back to School night until the bell rings on the last day).

Best to you and yours,

CANADIAN VERSION

SUBJECT: Back to school? Already?

When I was a kid, summer seemed like the longest period of time imaginable… and we never went back to school ‘til after Labour Day.

Fast forward to 2014: we’re still in the month of August, and I feel like every kid in the country is already back in the classroom.

Now that the kiddies have their noses in their books again, our thoughts can turn to football, cooler weather and hearing the rumble of school buses rolling down our streets early each morning.

If you’ve got kids headed back (or who’ve already gone back), the best of luck to them!

May their grades be As and their homework loads be light (and may YOU survive, sanity intact, from Back to School night until the bell rings on the last day).

Best to you and yours,